

Troy Linder Bio

How to catch BIG FISH on swimbaits & How to catch bass and walleye from shore

Troy Lindner was born and raised in the Brainerd Lakes Area of Minnesota. He grew up in a fishing family with four relatives in the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame (Al, Ron, James and Bill). As the son of legendary angler, Al Lindner, Troy naturally had a passion for the outdoors; it runs thick in his blood. He also has a passion for physical fitness and travel. His early dedication to athletics led him to compete at Arizona State University at the track and field teams. After graduating from ASU he settled in Los Angeles and founded a personal training business where he worked with many top personalities in T.V., music and sports. At the same time he was an avid bass fisherman, Troy also competed in a number of western tournament circuits. In the progress he has won over 40 events including an FLW open and the 2016 Wild West Bass Tournament Trail—where he became Angler of the Year.

Troy now splits the year almost in half between California and Minnesota. He spends the spring, summer in the north woods where he travels almost non-stop as the co-host of the AnglingBuzz television show and as the host of The Ontario Experience television series. These endeavors pretty much keep him on the water almost constantly from “ice-out” to “ice-in.” In the fall and winter he spends most of his time on the warmer, soft water areas of the Southwest fishing tournaments and traveling to far away bucket list fishing experiences.

Troy loves to travel and has fished all over the world: Sharks in Florida, Halibut in Alaska, Barramundi in Australia, zander and perch throughout Europe, carp and bass in China and Japan, and this just the beginning! Troy has a distinct love for shore fishing and shares those adventures through his social media accounts.
